A society's position on this dimension is reflected in whether people's self-image is defined in terms of "I" or "we" (Hofstede, 2012a). In a highly individualistic culture, members are able to make choices based on personal preference with little regard for others, except for close family or significant relationships.

Analytic philosophy is now generally seen as the dominant philosophical tradition in the English-speaking world, 1 and has been so from at least the middle of the last century. Over the last two decades its influence has also been steadily growing in the non-English-speaking world. One sign of this is the proliferation of societies for (p. 4) analytic philosophy around the world. 2 The growing ...
