Middle East Contemporary Survey

Background. In the World Values Survey conducted from 2010 to 2014, results show that in Yemen, Jordan, and Iraq fewer than 0.5% of those surveyed self-defined themselves as atheists; meanwhile, the highest percentage of self-defined atheists within the Middle East was in Kuwait, at 0.8%. Kuwait's comparatively high ratio can also be explained by the fact that when Kuwait Parliament passed a ...

A large-scale and widely-noted survey, "The Conversion of Europeans to the Values of the Right," suggests that Western Europe is trending conservative. But a close look at the survey data finds that not to be the case. La Fondation pour l'innovation politique (or the Fondapol Foundation), which calls itself a "liberal, progressive, and European think tank," surveyed 7,603 respondents in Great ...
